

SCENE	AUDIO/VO	ACTION
1	[Environmental sound: City hustle, faint keyboard typing]	Hong Kong night view, Victoria Harbour brightly lit. The camera pushes slowly from a high altitude toward a residential unit. Lighting is soft but carries a hint of late-night fatigue.

SCENE:

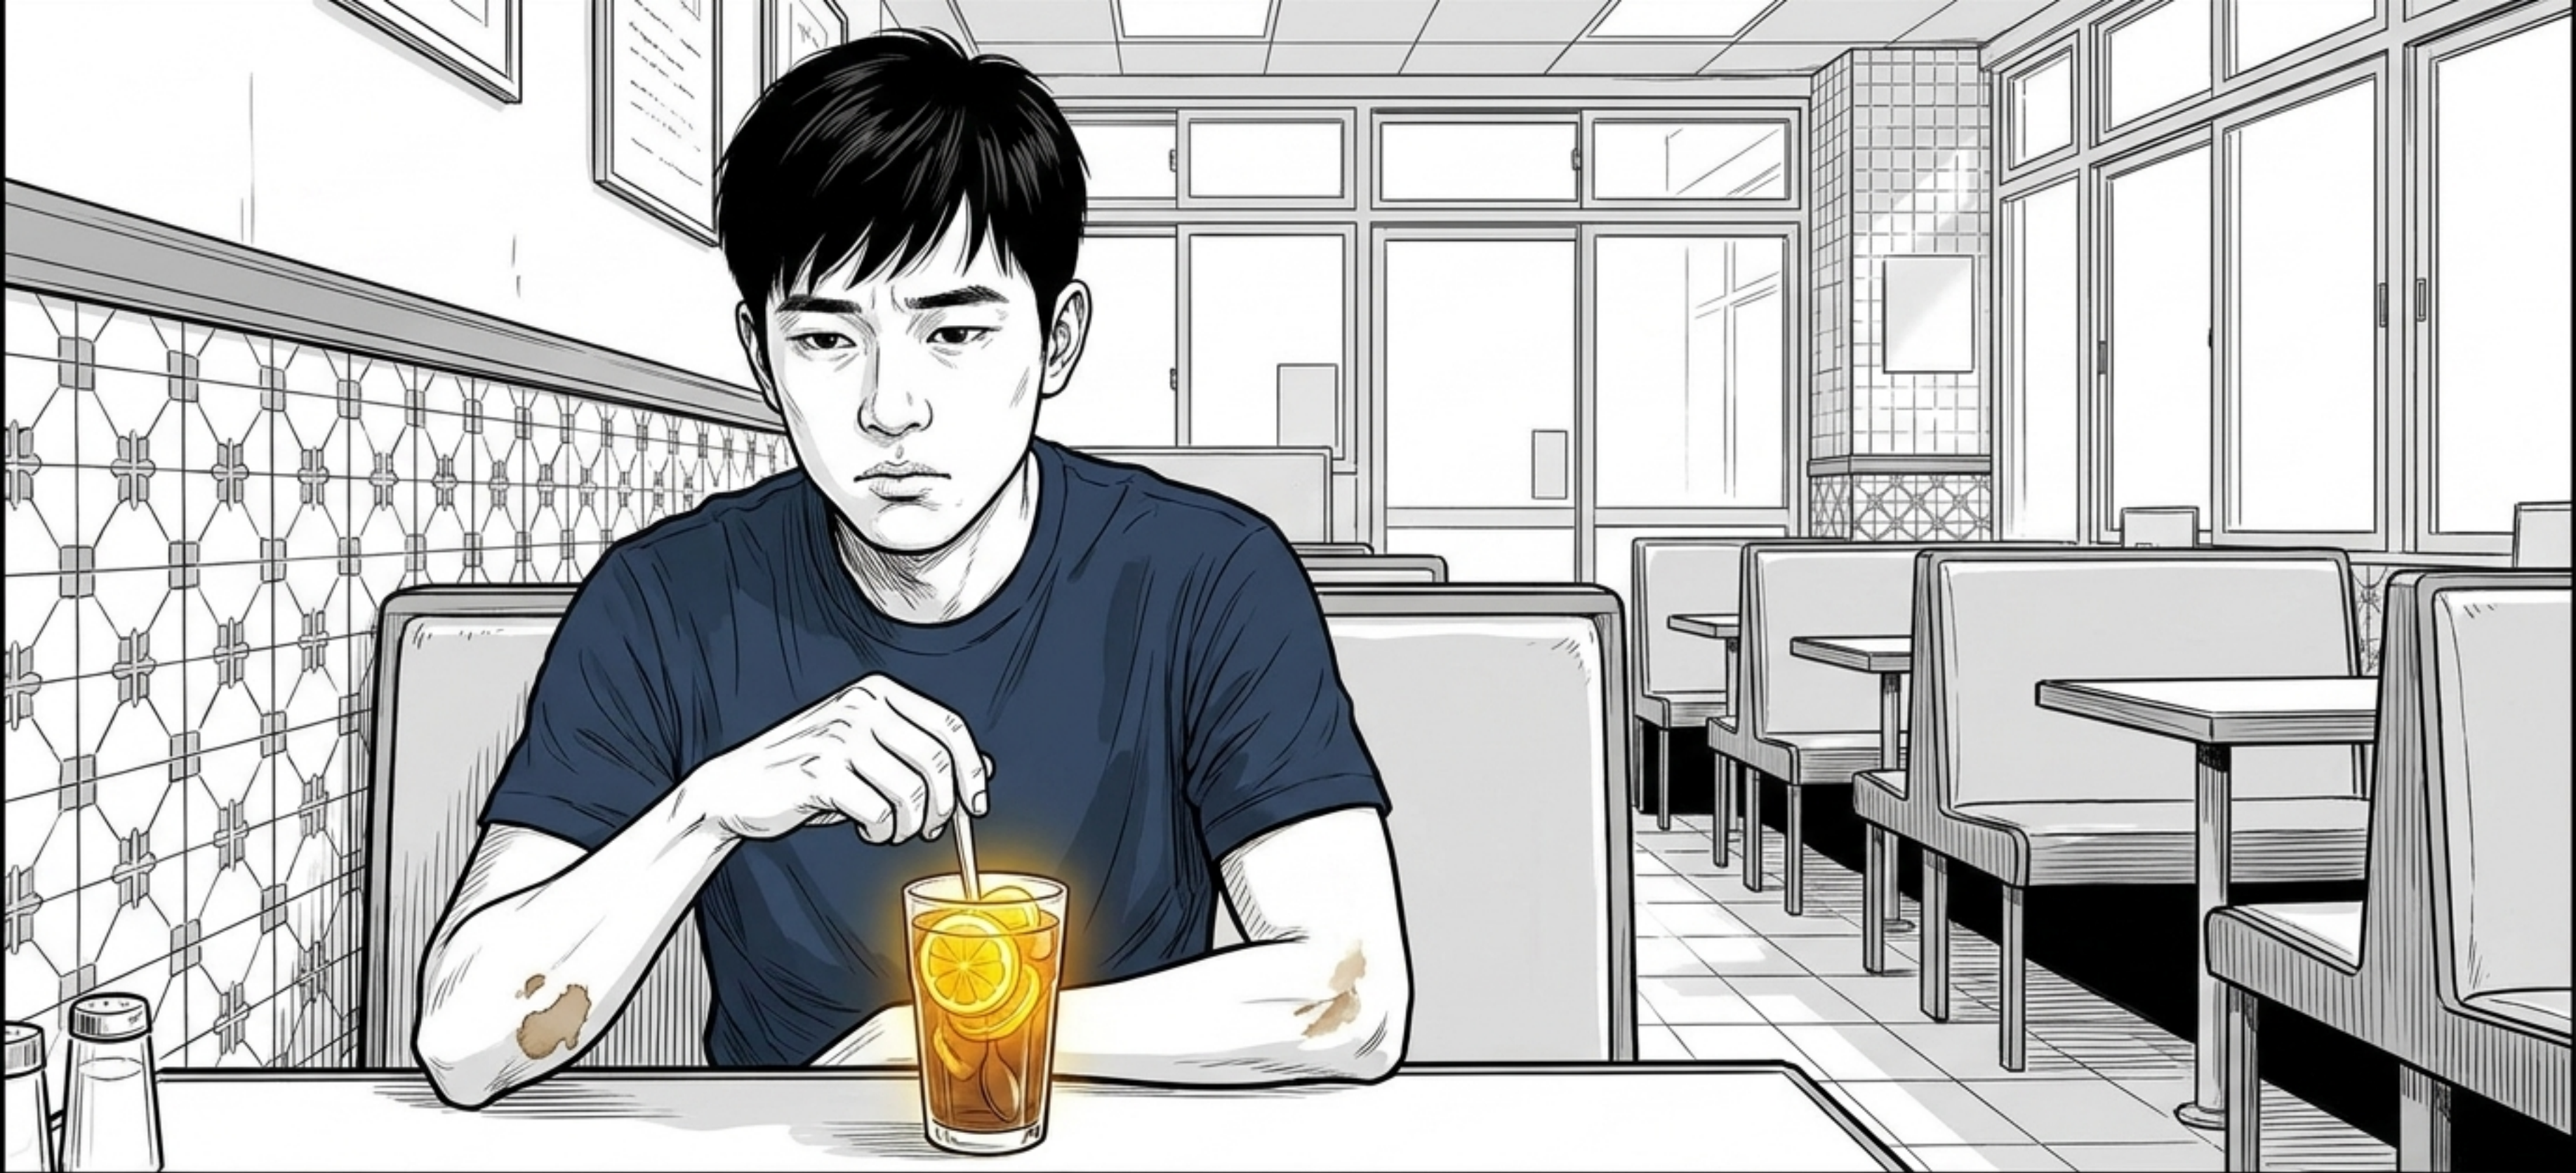

2

AUDIO/VO:

'Why do we work overtime every day, but still can't afford a flat?'

ACTION:

Extreme close-up of the female student. Face illuminated entirely by the phone screen. Swiping tiredly. Represents 'zero respect' and 'lying flat' sentiments purely through visual acting and lighting, without relying on any screen text. Slight camera shake.

SCENE:

3

VO:

'No point talking, the policies are all the same anyway.'

ACTION:

Male Barista sitting in a Cha Chaan Teng after work, stirring iced lemon tea helplessly. The background clearly establishes a classic HK diner aesthetic through distinct architectural linework rather than signage. Static shot.

SCENE: 4

VO:

VO: 'Innotech? It's just all talk. Where are the resources?'

ACTION:

Female entrepreneur at a co-working space staring at a computer screen. She is frowning and sighing slightly. The complexity of spreadsheets is translated into text-free geometric linework. Cool lighting tone.

SCENE:

5

VO:

"Medical staffing is short, we work to death, who cares?"

ACTION:

Male nurse in an MTR carriage after a night shift, resting against the window. His eyes are closed, looking exhausted. The train is sparse. Camera slowly pulls out to emphasize isolation within a clean space.

SCENE:

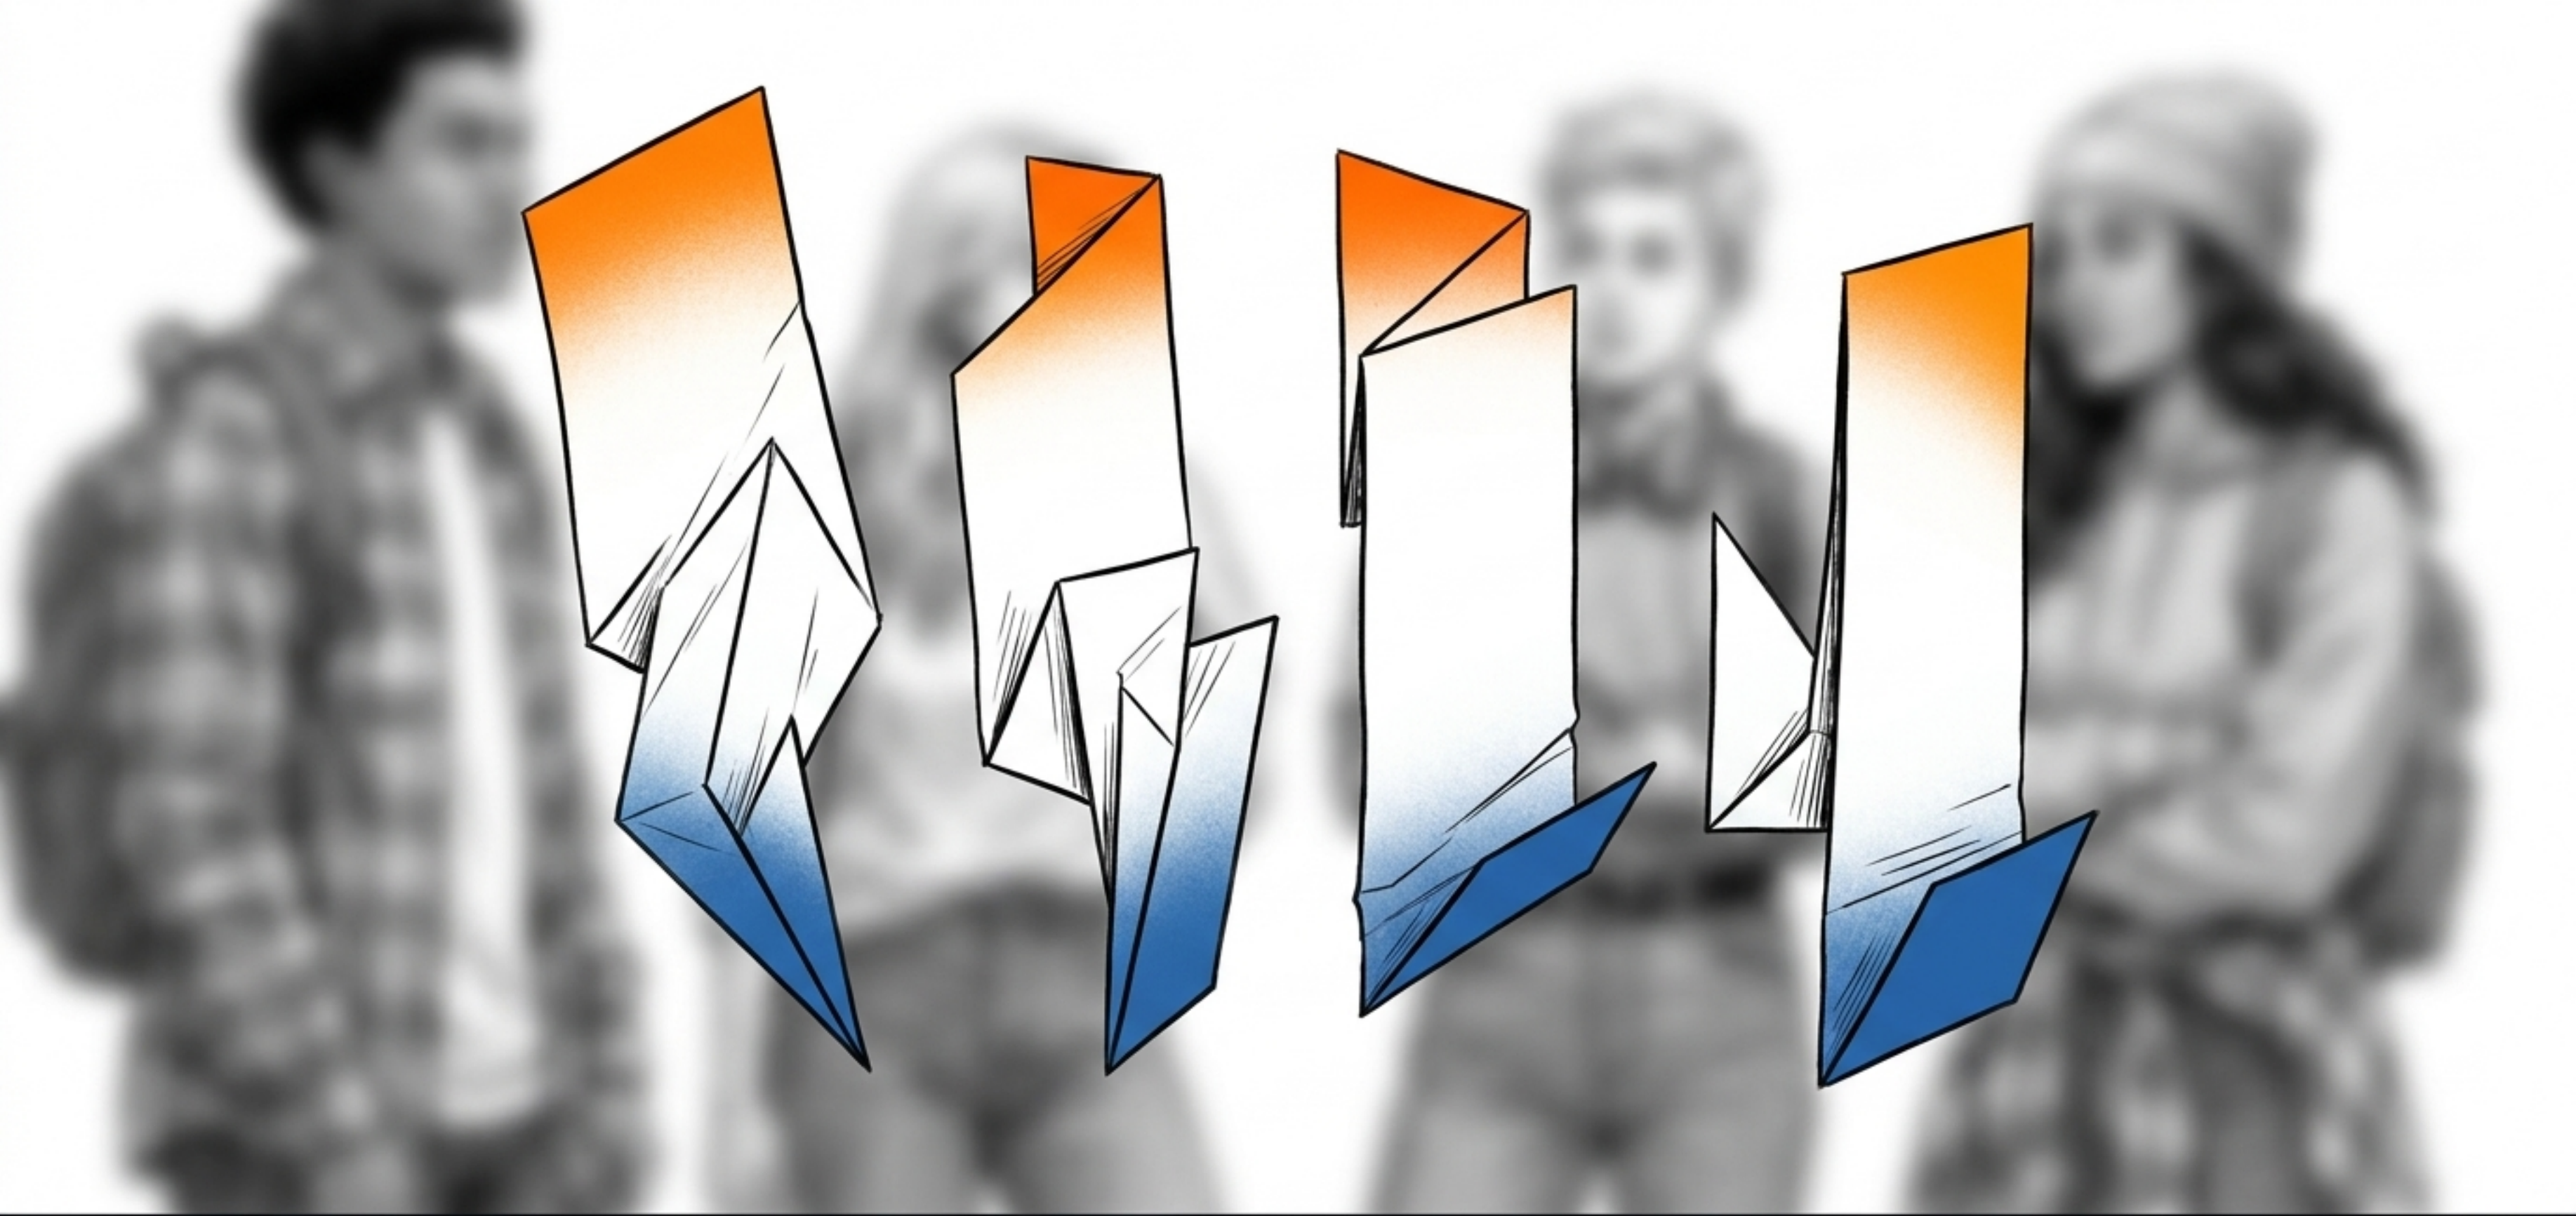

6

AUDIO:

[Sudden silence, only a faint hum]

ACTION:

Sudden freeze frame. The 'rant bubbles' of the four youths float above them. The composition shifts to a graphic collage. Colors are bright, shape dynamics carry a graffiti feel. Static shot.

SCENE:

7

VO:

'Are these voices only meant to stay online?'

ACTION:

The abstract rant bubbles begin to collapse vertically, folding downwards like physical paper. The background is slightly blurred, keeping focus purely on the dynamic geometry of the transformation. Lighting remains bright.

SCENE: 8

VO: "Actually, your dissatisfaction can become the agenda."

ACTION:

The folded paper transforms into a clear close-up of a committee agenda document. It visually represents policy areas purely through structured layout and icons rather than text. Official feel, camera pushes in slowly.

SCENE: 9

VO: 'The government isn't telling you to be quiet, but inviting you to join the board.'

ACTION: The first Youth Committee Member reads documents intently in a modern meeting room. The aesthetic shifts to empowered professionalism. Medium shot, static.

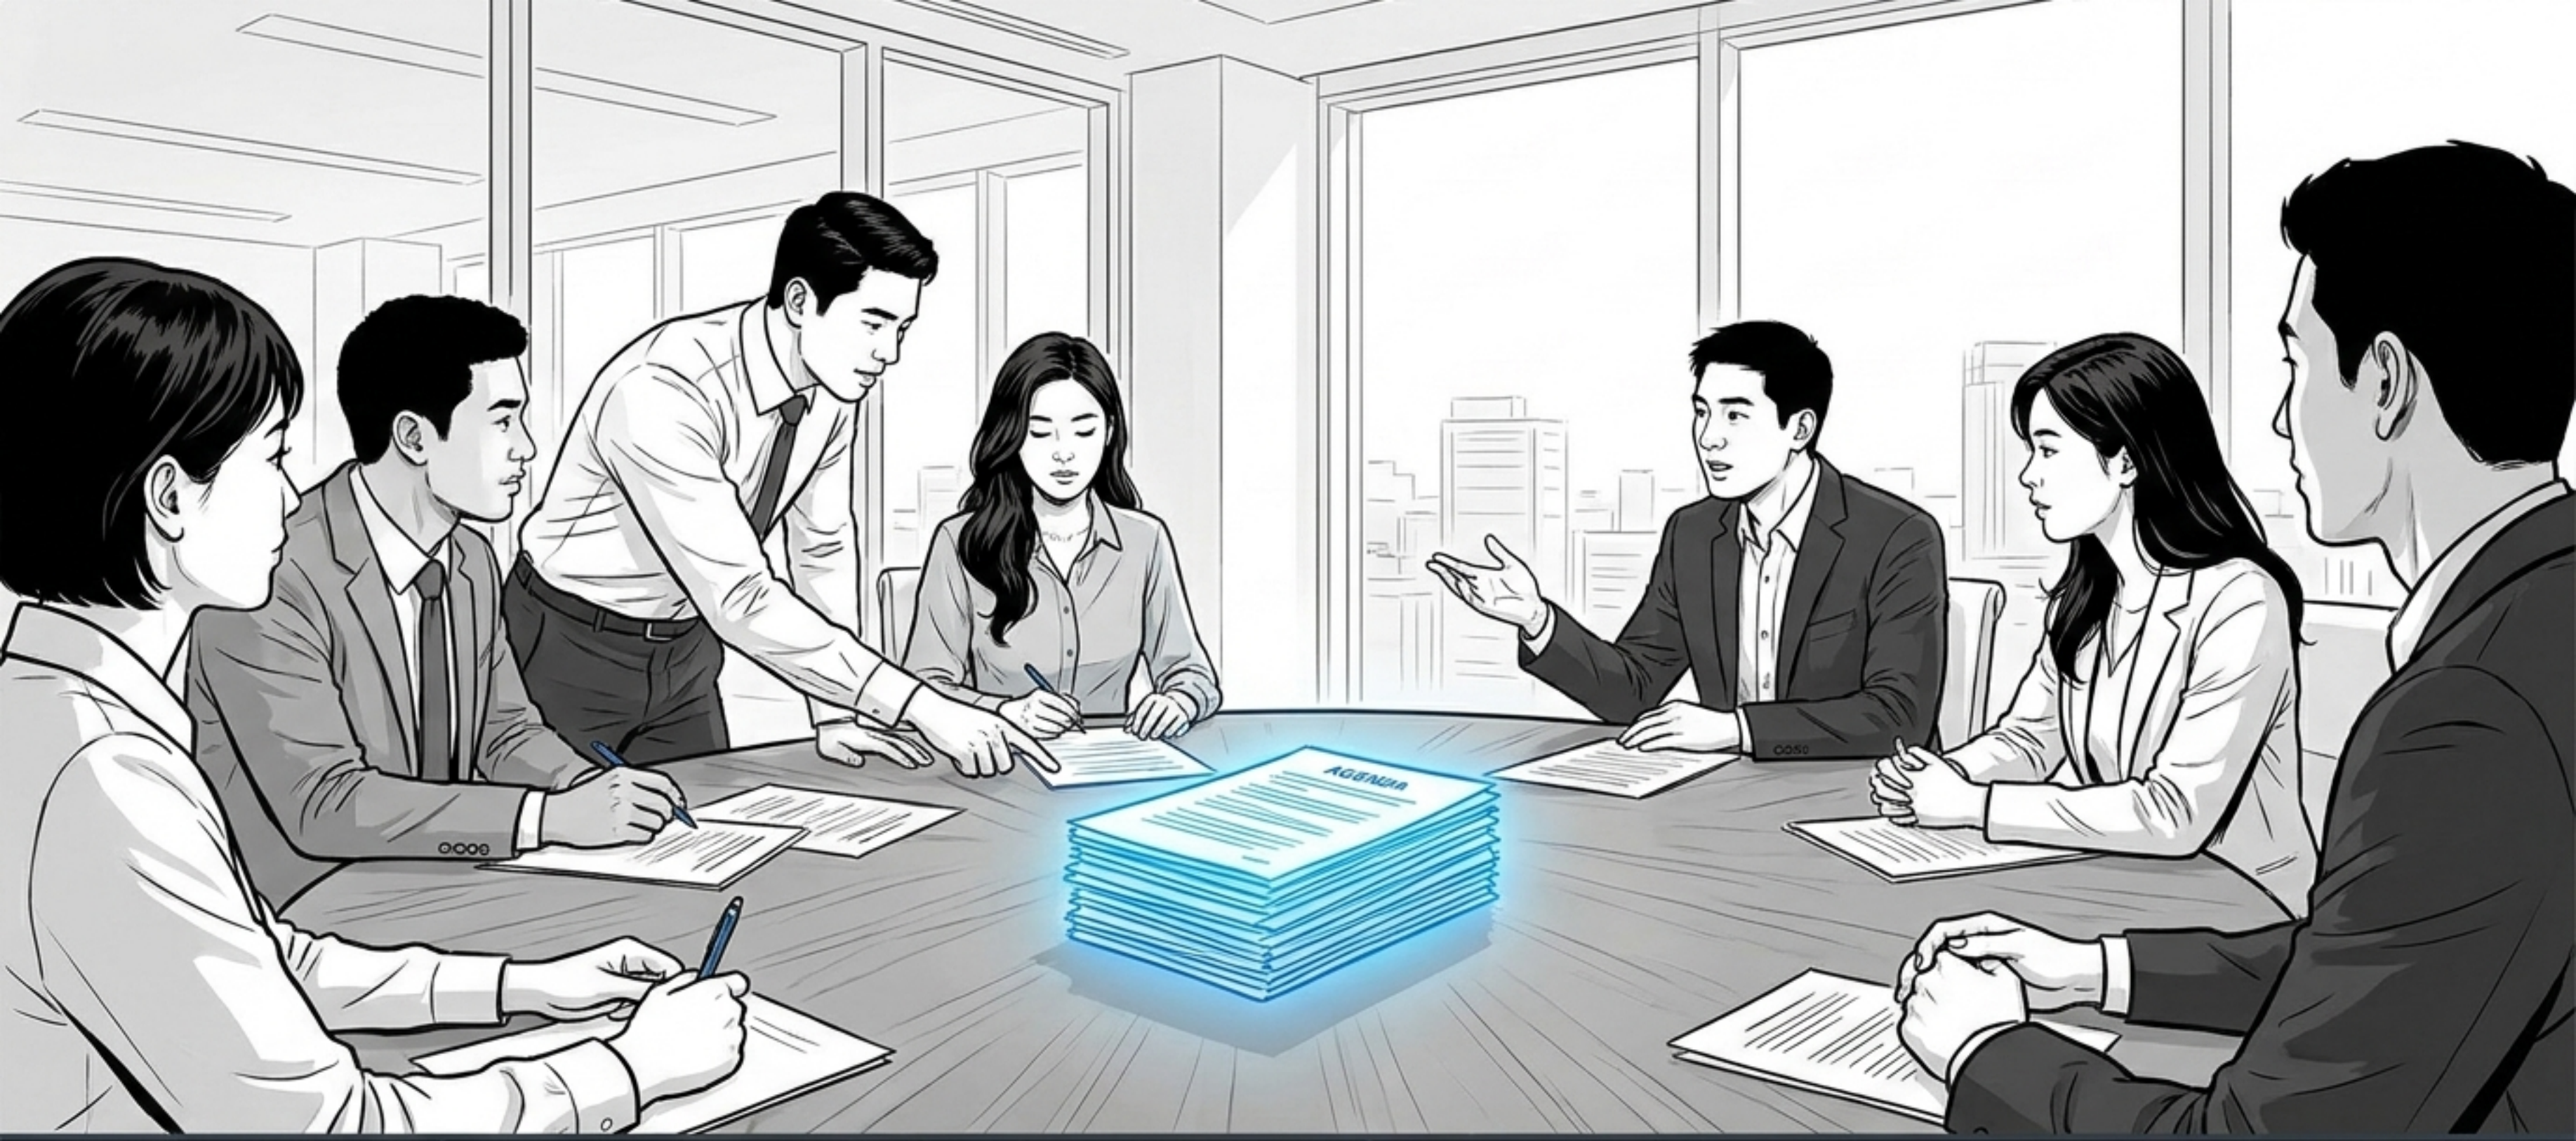

SCENE: 10

VO:

“Turn your insights into policy recommendations.”

ACTION:

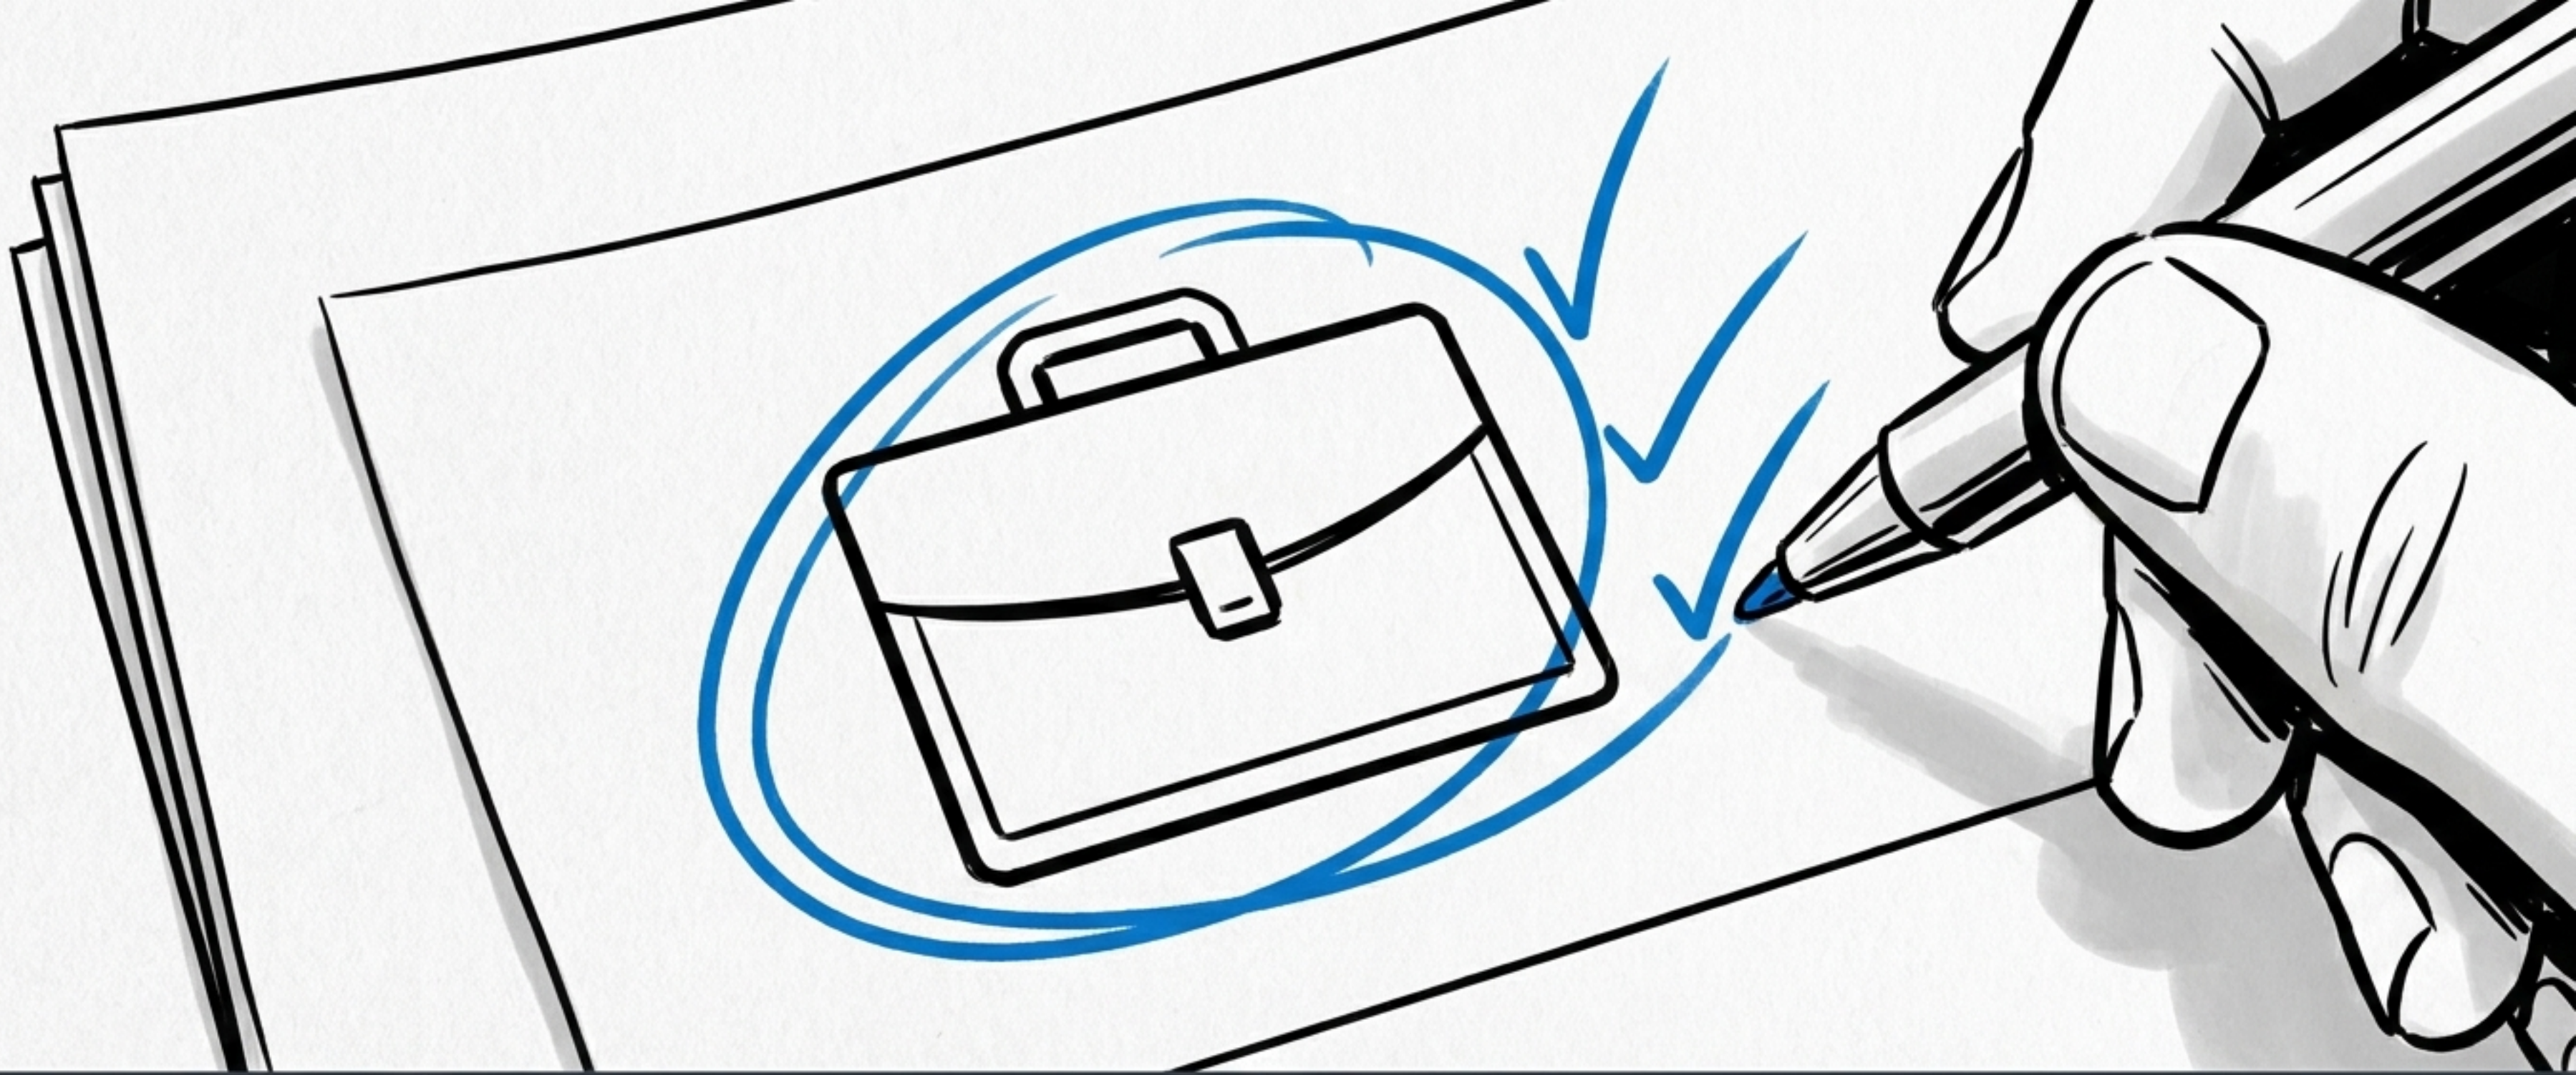

Another youth committee member speaking confidently in a meeting. Shot from a side-rear perspective over a shoulder to capture his active, assertive posture. Close-up, slight push in.

SCENE: 11

VO: "Youth is the engine of society, not the backdrop."

ACTION: Multiple youth committee members sitting around a conference table engaged in warm, serious discussion. Showcases a positive, collaborative group dynamic. Wide shot, slow pan.

SCENE:

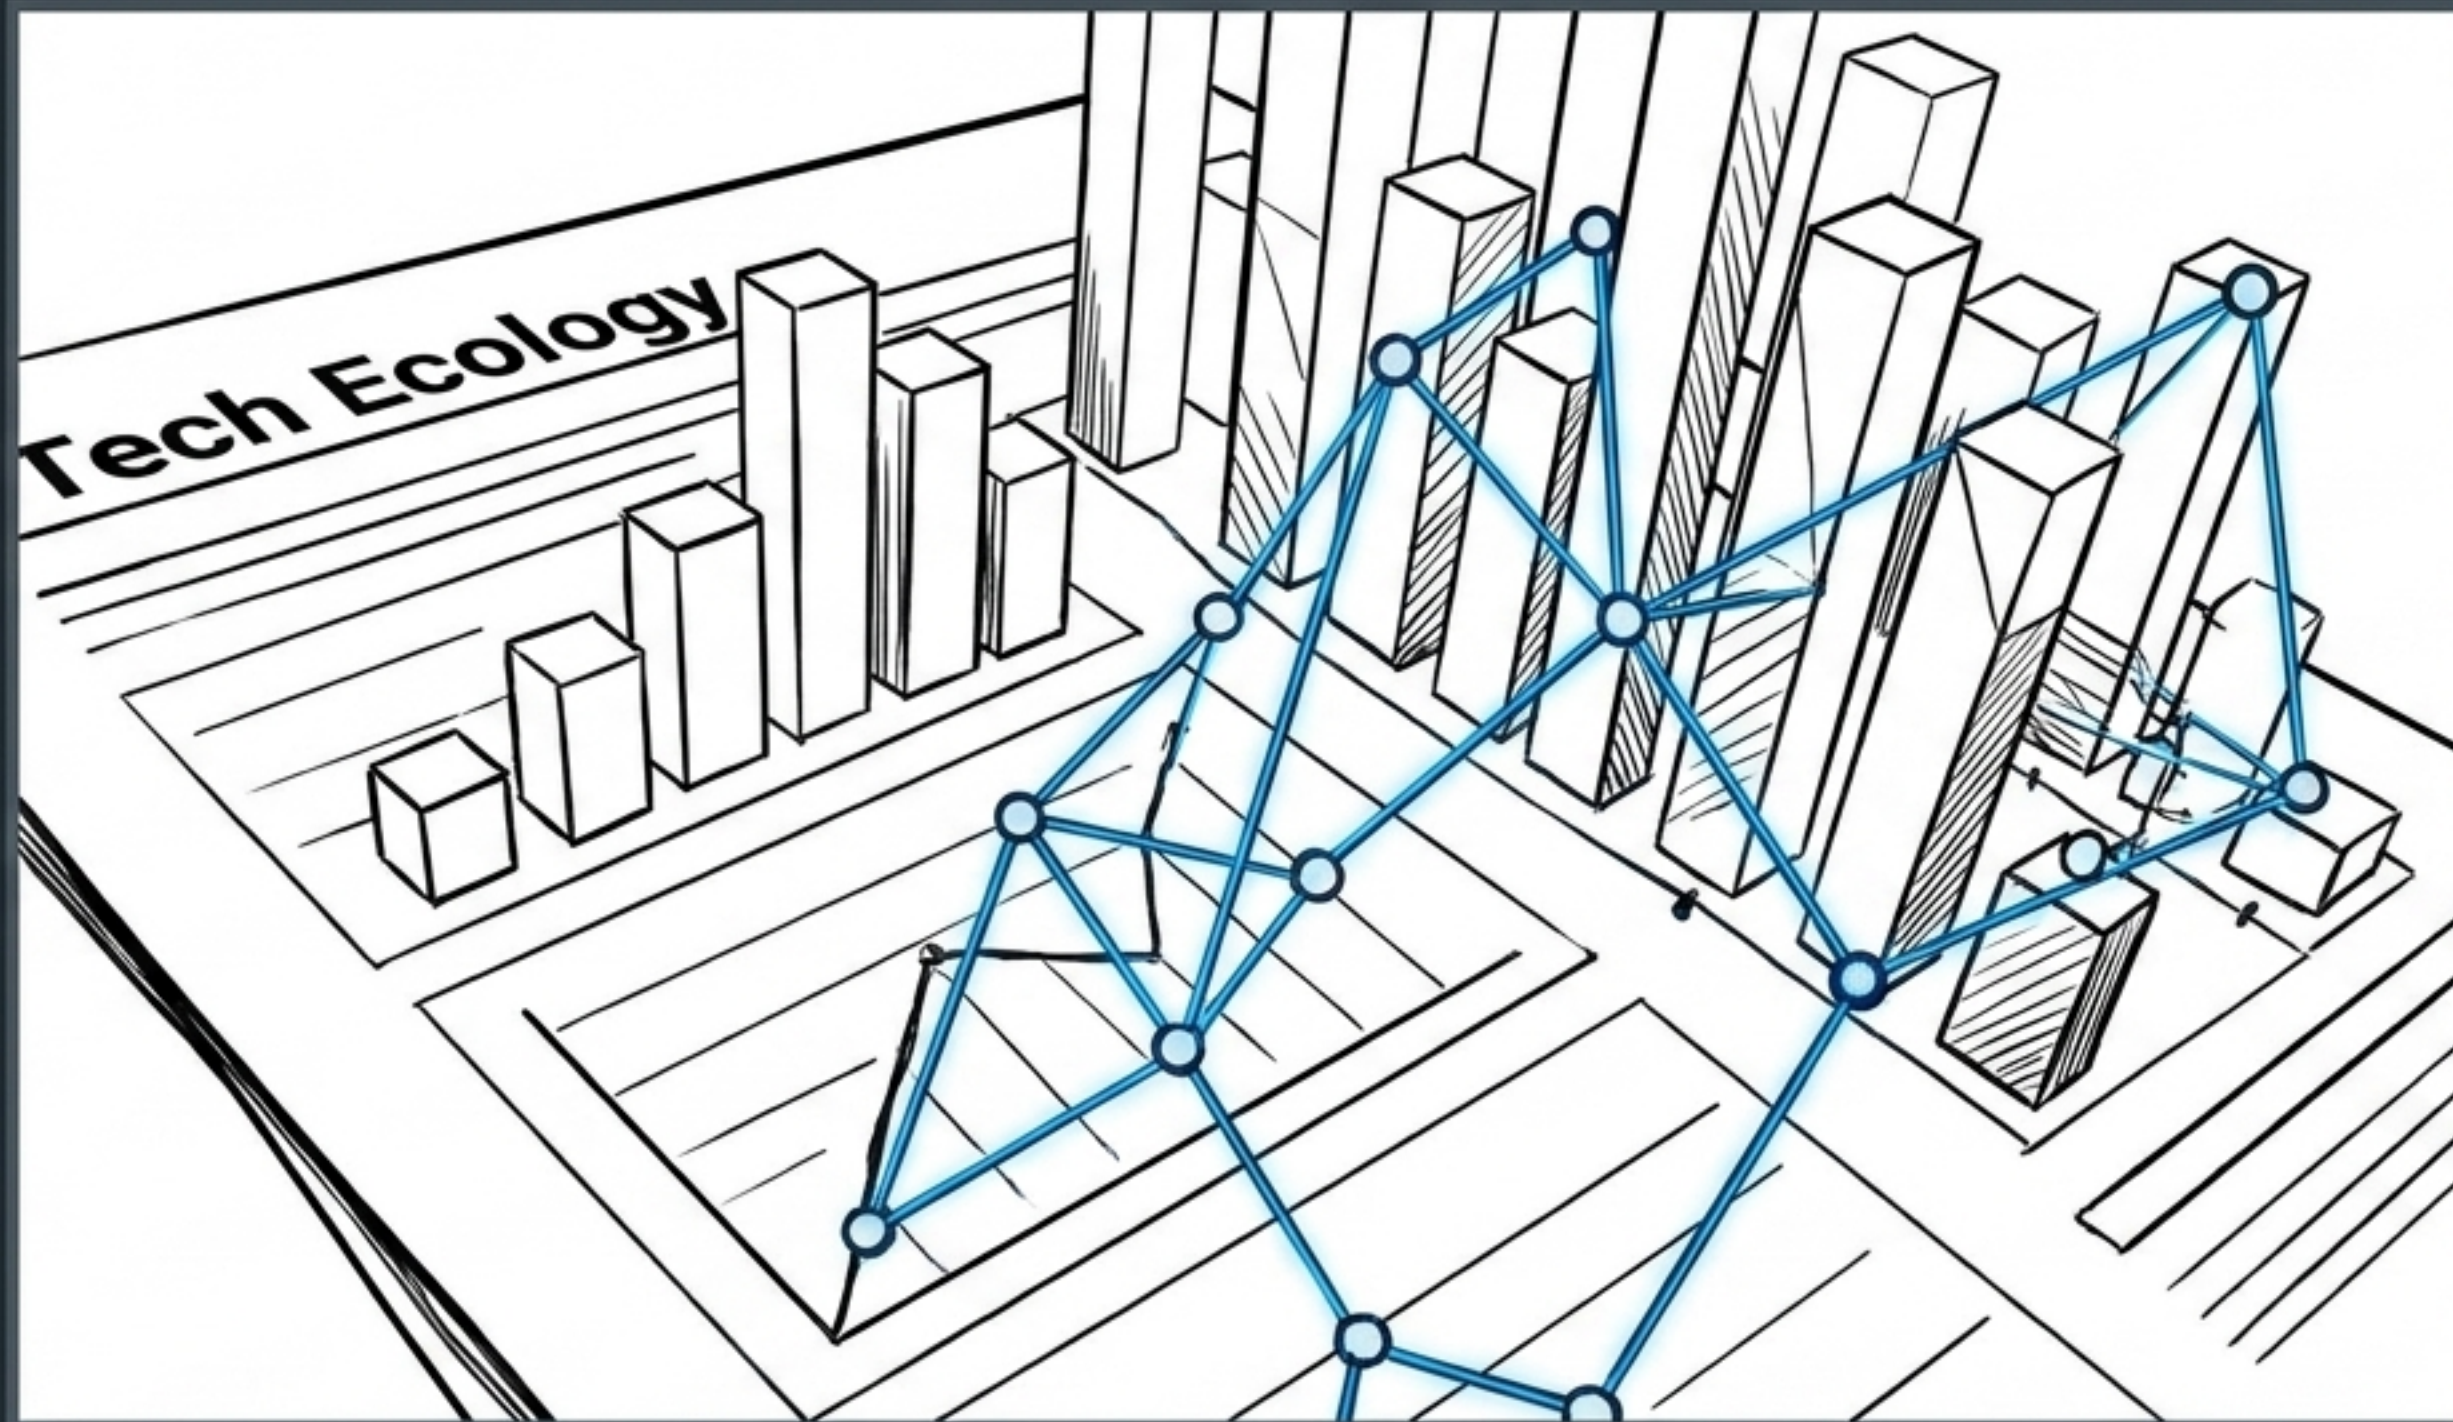

12

VO:

"The employment issues you care about can be discussed here."

ACTION:

Extreme close-up of the 'Employment Support' section of the agenda paper. Handwritten notes and emphasis marks are actively being drawn into the frame. Bright lighting. Static shot.

SCENE: 13

VO: “Innotech development needs your innovative thinking.”

ACTION: Close-up of another agenda paper section for “Innotech Ecology” featuring abstract charts and data visuals rendered as structural geometry. Camera pushes in dynamically.

SCENE:

14

VO:

Unite youth power to jointly solve social challenges.

ACTION:

Youth committee member interacting with residents in a grassroots community activity. She is smiling and listening actively. Medium shot, slight pan to emphasize ground-level connection.

SCENE: 15

VO:

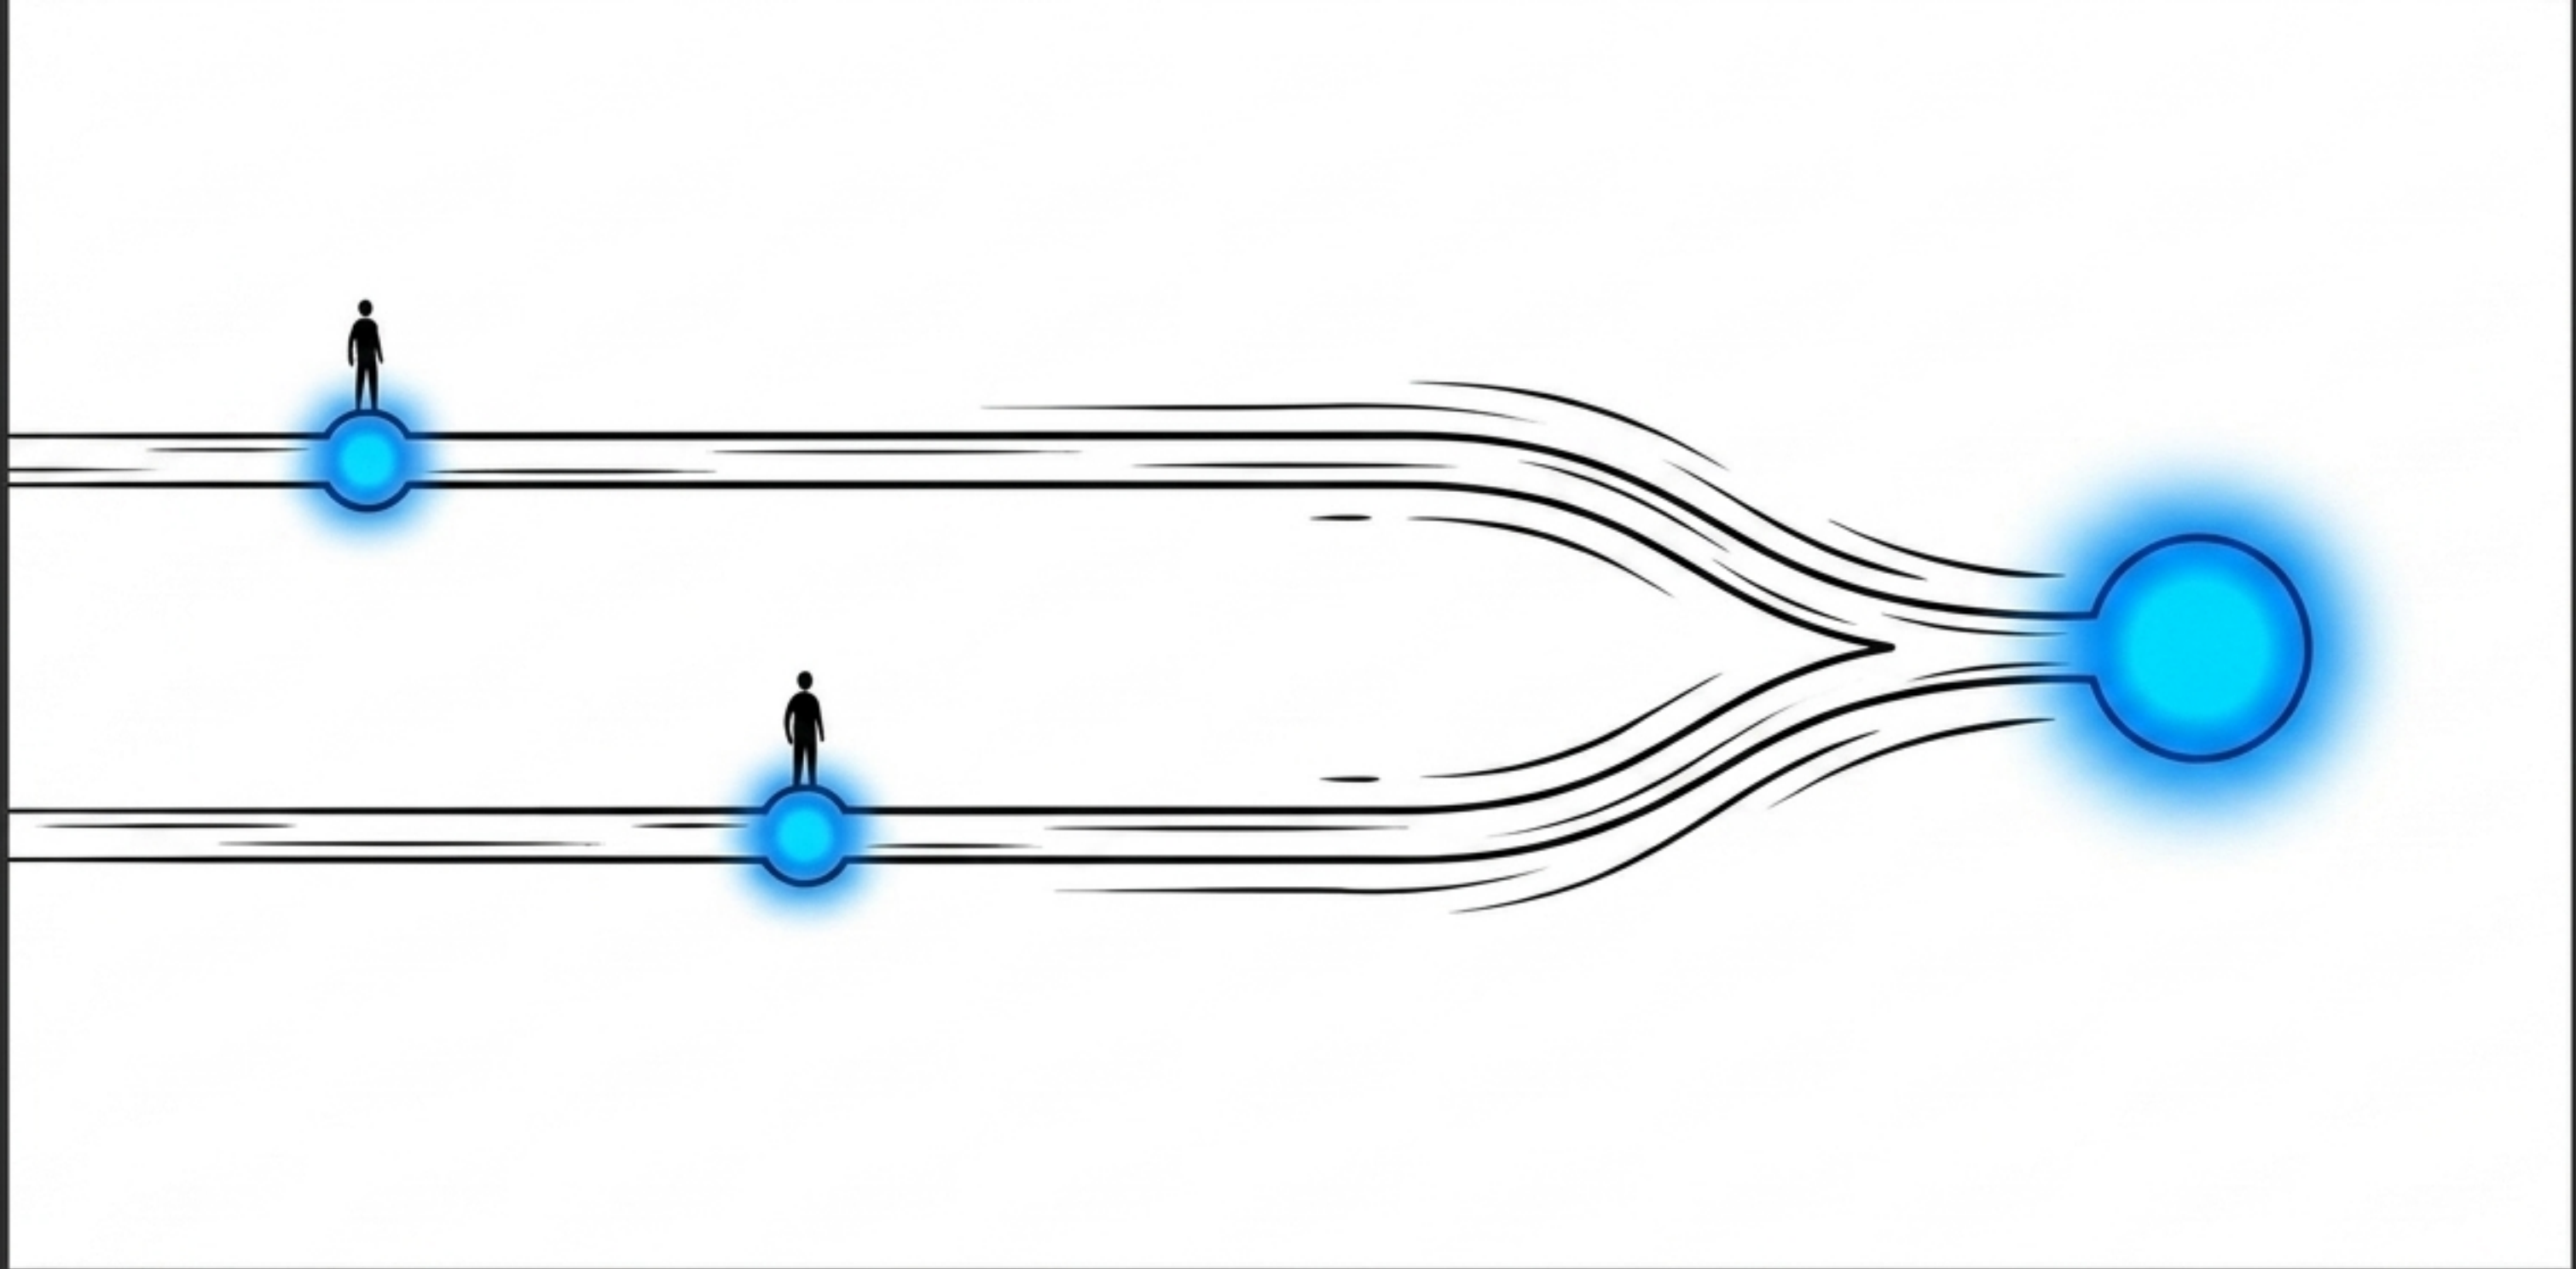

“From the grassroots to the top tier, your voice matters.”

ACTION:

Another youth committee member doing outdoor field research, taking notes seriously. The background establishes a bustling HK community layout. Medium shot, static.

SCENE: 16	VO:	ACTION:
	"The 10th Member Self-recommendation Scheme for Youth is now open for applications."	Animation graphic clearly showing the core theme of the program through visual metaphors instead of text. A seed creating ripples that build pillars. Clean, powerful conceptual design.

SCENE: 17	VO:	ACTION:
	"Whether you are 16 or 18, you have the opportunity to participate."	Animated visual representation of the dual-track age limits (16-35 and 18-35) using timeline nodes and converging paths instead of on-screen numbers or text. Dynamic and bright.

SCENE:

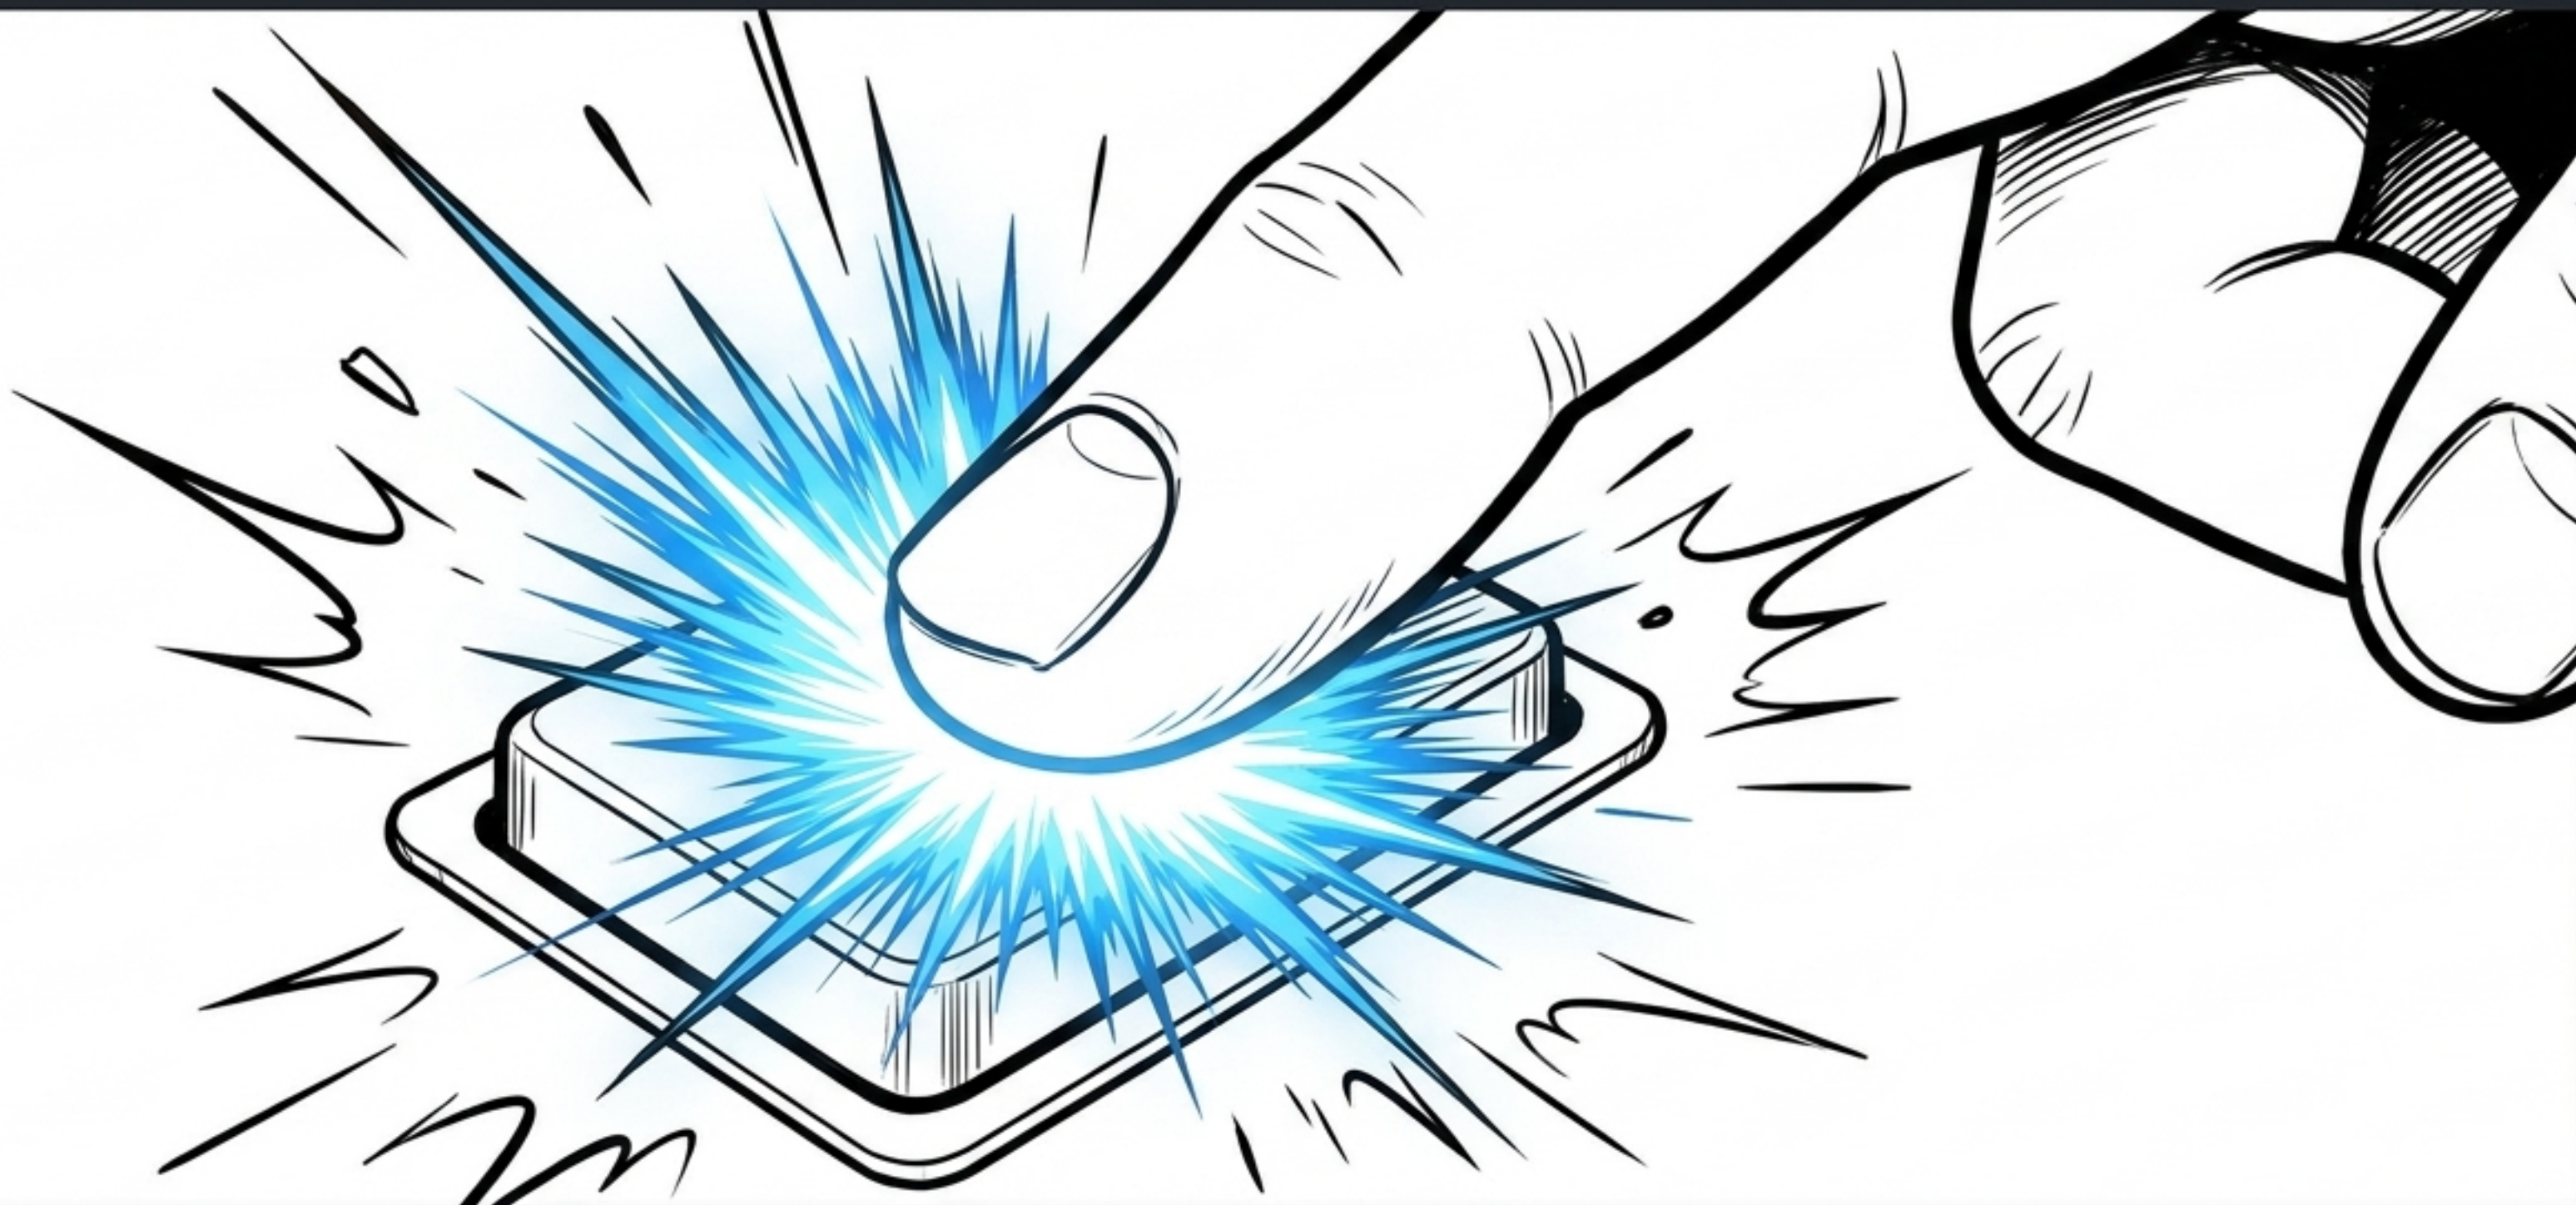

18

VO:

"Log into the Home and Youth Affairs Bureau website for details."

ACTION:

Mockup of the application website interface. Clean wireframe layout with a prominently featured CTA button. No actual text is rendered, pushing the conceptual agency visual style. Camera pushes in.

SCENE:

19

VO:

"Seize the opportunity to contribute to Hong Kong's future."

ACTION:

Extreme kinetic close-up of a hand decisively clicking the 'Submit' button. Intensely bright light radiating from the point of contact, emphasizing immediate action and youth agency.

SCENE: 20

VO:

"Don't just rant—join the agenda to change it."

ACTION:

Energetic youth montage climax. Smiling faces of diverse backgrounds stand together against HK landmarks like Lion Rock and Victoria Harbour. Wide hero shot capturing rapid, optimistic energy.

SCENE:

21

VO:

"Don't just rant—join the agenda to change it."
[Music swells, then fades]

ACTION:

Pure visual metaphor of the slogan. Chaotic energy lines convert precisely into structured, powerful upward paths over an abstract city silhouette. Bright and deeply hopeful.
